

COLOGIX ACQUIRES JACKSONVILLE INTERCONNECTION BUSINESS

JAX Meet Me Room Expands Cologix Platform to New Market with Emerging Interconnection Importance

Denver, Colo – September 16, 2013 – Cologix™, a network neutral interconnection and data center company, announced today, the acquisition of the JAX Meet Me Room (JMMR) located in the carrier hotel at 421 W. Church Street. JMMR is the most densely connected data center in Jacksonville, Florida in the most important telecom building in the region. The acquisition bolsters Cologix’s platform by adding a strategic and scaled meet me room and data center in a market set to emerge as a key interconnection point in the Southeastern United States.

“The submarine cables slated to land in Jacksonville create an opportunity for networks to deliver traffic directly to South America without the additional cost, latency and hurricane risk that comes with traversing through Miami,” said Grant van Rooyen, President and Chief Executive Officer of Cologix. “We are pleased to bring the JAX Meet Me Room business and customers into the Cologix platform. We have already initiated plans to make significant incremental investments in this facility to enhance infrastructure and expand capacity to support new networks interested in establishing a presence in Jacksonville.”

The JAX Meet Me Room operates over 9,000 SQF in the 421 W. Church Street carrier hotel as well as the building meet me room. Among those who trust the JAX Meet Me Room are 20+ carriers and a range of financial, cloud and enterprise customers.

Cologix now operates 16 network neutral data centers in Dallas, Jacksonville, Minneapolis, Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver. With the JAX Meet Me Room acquisition, Cologix supports 600+ customers and offers 330+ network choices for its customers.
